CALL FOR SHORT COURSES

Short courses are a series of presentations and exercises that provide review, instruction, and opportunity for advancement of understanding in a specific field (e.g., geoscience, resources, society) that is consistent with the main themes of the RFG2018 Conference. The short course should provide a means whereby a newcomer to the field can quickly come up to speed on the topic, as well as providing opportunities for more knowledgeable participants to increase their understanding and expertise.

Please refer to the Short Courses Submission Guidelines and budget template before submitting your proposal for short courses.

CALL FOR FIELD TRIPS

Safe and efficiently run field trips are among the most important aspects of a technical conference and provide the opportunity to learn by first-hand experience. A proposed field trip should have a clear focus and objective that is aligned with the RFG2018 conference. Thus, we encourage submissions across a broad spectrum of themes that provide opportunities to see a variety of geological environments, examine earth processes related to the formation of natural resources, and visit sites of resource extraction and water management. We encourage field trip proposals to indicate their alignment with conference themes and if possible proposed technical session(s).

Please refer to the Field Trips Submission Guidelines and budget template before submitting your proposal for field trips.
